

To whom it may concern:

Approximately three years ago when my daughter was born my mother past away and I moved in with my father to take care of him. As you know with a new child you are up all night and sleep off and on all day. At that time I would experience six to seven telemarketing calls an hour (which I heard was nothing compared to what some people get). I not only was awoken by countless telemarketers but my daughter was also wakened by these calls. Then my husband would come home and we ever time we would sit down to talk about the day and eat super the phone would ring. Of course, Telemarketer's. I couldn't rely on caller ID and since my aunt was in and out of the hospital I was afraid not to answer. Not only when I would answer, I would immediately tell them that I will not order from anyone who calls me this way. They would continue and continue and sometimes I would have to get rude and hang up because they wouldn't take no for an answer. The reason I never say anything but no is because in 1997 I had a phone company call me early in the morning after I had worked all night and ask me to verify my address and phone number. Half a sleep I did verify and that is all. I went to Florida for a vacation and when I returned found out that my long distance had been changed and they charged me outrageous amounts to be switch plus service fees and other charges. Luckily my local phone company defended my rights and took care of the problem without me paying extra charges. After this I won't even say no thank you!! Just NO!!!!

My thoughts are that I work hard all day long. I pay for my bills including my phone bill. I do not ask the government for assistants for anything. After I put my father's phone number on the Indiana No Call list my life and the life of all my family was more peaceful at home immediately. I do not want the call list to change unless it gets tougher for people to solicate by phone. As an American and as an American that wishes their home being a peaceful place to relax and enjoy our family. It is not right that I have to pay for someone to advertise to me and when I try to say no they continue on and on and on. I can't change that channel just hang up.

Since that I have moved back to my own home and the first thing I did when my phone was hooked up was get on the Indiana no call list. This should be my right. I do pay for my phone. Not the Banks or other business's. ME!!!

I truly hope that you will not grant the Banks any rights to call me when I purposely choose not to be disturb by joining the no call list. I not only will let the banks no that if they are granted this previlage every bank that calls me at home when I ask not to be disturb will find me not using there services. I am strongly against this action taken by the banks and expect the FCC to deny this request immediately based on the amount of people who have signed on to the NO CALL LIST around the nation. This should tell you people do not want this. And as a voting American if I was to ever find out that someone voted for these companies and against the NO CALL LIST I will not vote for them. This is the only reason I voted our Attorney General back to his office. To protect us from unwanted telemarketing.

I do hope that I will get some type of response to this letter.
